

HAPAX LEGOMENON ΕΠΙΨΕΥΔΗΣ (IL. 4. 235)?

The lexical-semantic field ‘truth and lie’ is among the richest in Homer and in the early Greek poetry.<sup>1</sup> In Homer, the majority of words in the group ‘lie’ belongs to its periphery and has occasional or metaphorical meaning; some of them are hapax legomena.<sup>2</sup> Even the word ψεύστης, which later has a broad meaning ‘liar’ with numerous connotations, such as ‘cheat’, ‘deceiver’, ‘fraud’,<sup>3</sup> in Homer is used only twice, and always as a term of abuse.<sup>4</sup>

In the present article I would like to show that one of these peripheral words occurs in Il. 4. 235.

234 Ἀργεῖοι, μή πώ τι μεθίετε θούριδος ἀλκῆς·
οὐ γὰρ ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι πατήρ Ζεὺς ἔσσειτ' ἀρωγός, ἀλλ' οἳ περ πρότεροι ὑπὲρ ὄρκια δηλήσαντο
τῶν ἧτοι αὐτῶν τέρενα χροά γῦπες ἔδονται, ἡμεῖς αὖτ' ἀλόχους τε φίλας καὶ νήπια τέκνα
239 ἄξομεν ἐν νηεσσιν, ἐπὴν πτολίεθρον ἔλωμεν.<sup>5</sup>

Ye Argives, relax ye no whit of your furious valour; for father Zeus will be no helper of lies; nay, they that were the first to work violence in defiance of their oaths, their tender flesh of a surety shall vultures devour, and we shall bear away in our ships their dear wives and little children when we shall have taken their citadel.<sup>6</sup>

Although the reading in 235 ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι ‘on the side of liars’ seems appropriate at the first sight, there is a difficulty, as the adjective ψευδής is attested in Greek texts comparatively late<sup>7</sup> and is not attested in Homer. As for variae lectiones in 235, I would call them diagnostic, as they replace one difficulty by another. For example, the reading ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι ἄρωγός accepted by W. Leaf (1900) and M. West (1998) uses a Homeric noun ψεύδος<sup>8</sup> instead of the non-Homeric adjective ψευδής. However, it breaks the pattern that exists in Homer between the word ἄρωγός helper and the dativus personae (to whom or for whom)<sup>9</sup> that regularly accompanies it. Besides, the construction ἄρωγός + ἐπί with a dative<sup>10</sup> is not attested anywhere in Homer.

Polemics about interpretation of line 235 – ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι versus ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι – are ancient and are attested in the scholia: Hermappias read the noun ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι ὡς “τείχεσσιν” (H 135), because in his opinion Homer had never used ψευδής on its own, only in compounds Ἄψευδής (personal name) Il. 18. 46 and φιλοψευδής Il. 12. 164.<sup>11</sup>

The scholia that quote Herodian refer to Aristarchus’ reading ἐπὶ ψευδέσ(σ)ι ἄρωγός: Ἀρίσταρχος ἀναγιγνώσκει “ψευδέσσι” ὡς σαφέσσι.<sup>12</sup> τοῦτο γὰρ φησι θέλει δηλοῦν οὐ γὰρ τοῖς ψεύσταις Τρωσὶ βοηθεῖ ὁ Ζεὺς.<sup>13</sup> Instead of bringing supporting arguments, <sup>7</sup> The first evidence of the adjective ψευδής is in an Attic epigram IG I<sup>2</sup> 700 in the first half of the 5th century BC: οἱ τε λέγοσι λόγος ἀδίκος φευδᾶς κατ’ ἐκένο. See P. Maas, “Zum griechischen Wortschatz (ἐπιψευδής, πατερίων, ὄρα)”, in: Annuaire de l’Institut de Philologie et d’Histoire Orientales et Slaves 6 (Mélanges Boisacq 1938) 129–130 = idem, Kleine Schriften (München 1973) 197–198. As for Hes. Th. 229, I agree with those who accept the reading with the noun ψεύδεα (and not the adjective ψευδέας). See M. L. West, Hesiod. Theogony. Ed. with prolegomena and commentary (Oxford 1966) 231.

<sup>9</sup> Leaf admits that the use of an abstract noun instead of a dativus personae is strained: “It is true that ἀρήγειν and cognate forms are elsewhere only used by H. with personal datives, not with abstract words like ψεύδος: but the idea of being ‘a helper for lies’ is not impossibly bold”: Leaf (n. 3) 235.

<sup>10</sup> Another five times: Il. 8. 205 Δαναοῖσιν ἄρωγοί; 18. 502 ἀμφοτέροισιν... ἄρωγοί; 21. 371 = 428 Τρώεσσιν ἄρωγοί; Od. 18. 232 ἐμοὶ... ἄρωγοί.

<sup>11</sup> Scholia Graeca in Homeri Iliadem. Ed. H. Erbse. I (Berolini 1969) 493. Hermappias, who is known to have lived after Aristarchus, is quoted only three times in scholia (Il. 4. 235; 9. 326; 13. 137), though R. Gudemann (“Hermappias”, RE 8 [1912] 721) believes that Hermappias’ contribution to Homeric scholarship must have been important, judging by the weight attributed to him in those three places.

To this discussion I would add some observations, following J. Wackernagel and E. Risch.<sup>20</sup> In Homer, the adjectives on -ης, -ες (like ψευδής) do not occur, unless they are compounds (μένος – δυσμενής, νέφος – κελαινεφής, ψεῦδος – ἀψευδής; σφάλλω – ἀσφαλής, λήθω – ἀληθής etc.).

Still, whether we accept the reading ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι or ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι, the problem of the unusual construction (ἐπί + dat.) with ἄρωγός remains. D. Monro in his grammar of Homeric dialect in the section on ἐπί treats Il. 4. 235 as a special case where (ἐπί + dat.) with ἄρωγός means “will be a helper with (on the side of) falsehood (or false men, reading ψευδέσσι)”.<sup>21</sup> There were attempts to resolve this difficulty since the antiquity: the scholia mention as hypothesis the tmesis ἐπαρωγός: ἐπί and ἄρωγός (ἢ δὲ ἐπὶ πρὸς τὸ ἄρωγός β Τ). This hypothesis is considered by K. Ameis and C. Hentze,<sup>22</sup> yet it is difficult to prove, as ἐπαρωγός occurs only once in Od. 11. 498.<sup>23</sup>

Risch, Wortbildung der homerischen Sprache (Berlin 1974) 80–81. Risch mentions ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι among exceptions as a v. l. to ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι, but prefers the reading with the noun.

<sup>23</sup> As for the possibility of tmesis ἐπιέσσεται, only one instance (θεοὶ δ' ἐπὶ μάρτυροι ἔστων, Od. 1. 273) can serve as a parallel. Still, it is difficult to decide

I believe it is the conjecture of P. Maas that solves all the difficulties: the dativus personae with ἄρωγός, the unusual ἐπί, the need to choose between ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι and ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι.<sup>24</sup> Maas suggests the reading ἐπιψευδέσσι, without word division between ἐπὶ and ψευδέσσι. He sees the adjective ἐπιψευδής as a synonym to ἐπίορκος ‘perfidious’. The only serious disadvantage of Maas’ conjecture<sup>25</sup> is that the adjective ἐπιψευδής is a hapax: it does not occur either in literary texts or in inscriptions.

M. Leumann accepts Maas’ conjecture as making sense; he believes that the adjective ἐπιψευδής could have been formed from τὸ ψεῦδος following the same pattern as in the pair ἐπικρατής and τὸ κράτος.<sup>26</sup> Likewise, I would accept ἐπιψευδέσσι ex coniectura, and would add that the verb ἐπιψεύδομαι<sup>27</sup> is well attested after Homer.

In addition, I would like to mention a treaty De trinitate of a Christian author of the 4th century Didymus Caecus in the edition by I. Seiler, where a citation from Homer – precisely our verse Il. 4. 235 – is given with the reading ἐπιψεύδεσσι: De trinitate, 540 B 8 (6. 13, 1. 7). Neither Maas nor anyone else refers to this citation in Didymus; Seiler does not comment on the verse in her apparatus criticus.<sup>28</sup> De trinitate is edited from one manuscript (Codex Vaticanus Angelic. 116, 10th century), but the manuscript reads the two words separately, and places an accentus gravis on the ἐπὶ.<sup>29</sup> The question, whether it was Seiler herself, who adopted the reading ἐπιψεύδεσσι

<sup>27</sup> The TLG brings the following instances: Xen. Hier. 2. 16, 3 ἐπιψεύδονται; Arist. EE 1229 b 22 ἐπιψεύδονται; Philo Jud. LA 3. 61. 9 ἐπιψεύδεται, Flac. 170. 2 ἐπιψεύδονται; A. R. 3. 381, Plut. Mor. 16. 4. 1 ἐπιψεύδεσθαι; Flavius Ios. AJ 18. 209. 2 ἐπιψευδομένων etc. (In Lucianus the verb occurs six times, often with a second prefix.)

<sup>28</sup> Didymus Caecus. De trinitate. Ed. I. Seiler (Meisenheim 1975). The edition is used in the TLG. In Patrologiae cursus completus 39 (1858) the verse is quoted from an edition of Homer: ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι. The Latin translation given in Patrologia reflects rather the reading ἐπιψευδέσσι than ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι: “nec enim mendacibus pater Deus erit auxiliator”. I thank Nina Almazova and Dmitry Bumazhnov for facilitating access to Seiler’s edition.

<sup>29</sup> I thank Natalie Tchernetska for checking the manuscript and for help editing this article.

following Maas' ἐπιψευδέσσι and who thus corrected the manuscript,<sup>30</sup> remains open.

Didymus, who was blind and was likely to listen to Homeric verses, must have perceived the ἐπιψευδέσσι as the only meaningful variant, connected to the well-known verb ἐπιψεύδομαι. In the Christian literature of the 4th century, the verb ἐπιψεύδομαι is used more often than before: according to the TLG, it occurs 14 times, which is more frequently than from Xenophon to Lucian inclusive. Didymus himself uses a participle ἐπιψευδόμενοι twice (Comm. in Zachariam 3. 158. 7; 3. 245. 4).

Thus, if Maas' conjecture is correct and the word ἐπιψευδής existed in Greek alongside Homeric hapax legomena ἄψευδής and φιλοψευδής, it could have belonged to the periphery of the group 'lie' as a poetic synonym to ἐπίορκος 'perfidious'.<sup>31</sup>

Статья написана в поддержку конъектуры П. Мааса (1938 г.) в стихе Il. IV, 235 οὐ γὰρ ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι πατήρ Ζεὺς ἔσσει ἄρωγός. Текст схолиев отражает возникшую уже в античности полемику: ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι versus ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι. Германпий читал ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι, опираясь на наблюдения над гомеровской лексикой: поэт употребляет прилагательное ψευδής лишь в составе сложных слов – ἄψευδής (имя нимфы) Il. XVIII, 46, φιλοψευδής Il. XII, 164. Однако большинство рукописей и издателей под влиянием

<sup>31</sup> M. Schmidt treats ἐπιψευδής as a synonym to ἐπίορκος in his article on ἐπίορκος in Lfgre. Lief. 12. The adjective ἐπιψευδής as a variant is mentioned in etymological dictionaries: H. Frisk, Griechisches etymologisches Wörterbuch II (Heidelberg 1970) 1132; P. Chantraine, Dictionnaire étymologique de la langue grecque. Histoire de mots IV (Paris 1980) 1287. See also Greek-English lexicon. A supplement. Ed. E. A. Barber (Oxford 1968): ἐπιψευδής = ἐπίορκος, proba. in Il. 4. 235. Michael M. Kumpf, author of the dissertation The Homeric Hapax Legomena and their Literary Use by Later Authors, especially Euripides and Apollonius Rhodius (Ohio State University 1974), did not mention ἐπιψευδής in his Four Indices of the Homeric Hapax Legomena (Hildesheim – Zürich – New York 1984) as he used Allen's edition, who adopts the reading of the verse with two words separated.

Aristarchomania принимает чтение ἐπὶ ψευδέσσι. Прилагательное ψευδής, засвидетельствованное в текстах сравнительно поздно, у Гомера действительно не встречается. Так, чтение ἐπὶ ψεύδεσσι ἄρωγός ‘помощник при лжи, на стороне лжи’, которое принимают, в частности, Лиф (1900) и Уэст (1998), использует обычное для Гомера существительное ψεῦδος. Однако оно нарушает другую закономерность, в соответствии с которой ἄρωγός в гомеровских поэмах всегда сопровождается дативом лица.

На наш взгляд, конъектура П. Мааса остроумно разрешает все проблемы. Маас предлагает не делать словораздела между ἐπὶ и ψευδέσσι и читать ἐπιψευδέσσι. Прилагательное ἐπιψευδής он расценивает как синоним к гомеровскому ἐπίορκος ‘нарушитель клятвы’. Единственный серьезный недостаток этой конъектуры заключается в том, что Маас предлагает гапакс: прилагательное ἐπιψευδής не встречается ни в литературных текстах, ни в надписях.

Мы ввели в существующую полемику дополнительные наблюдения. В гомеровских поэмах нет не только ψευδής, но и вообще прилагательных на -ης, -ες, если это не композиты (μένος – δυσμενής, νέφος – κελαινεφής, ψεῦδος – ἀψευδής; σφάλλω – ἀσφαλής, λήθω – ἀληθής etc.). Об этом явлении пишут Вакернагель и Риш. Лойман принимает конъектуру Мааса, находя, что она дает хороший смысл и что ἐπιψευδής образовано от τὸ ψεῦδος по той же словообразовательной модели, что ἐπικρατής от τὸ κράτος. Мы также склоняемся к тому, чтобы принять ἐπιψευδέσσι ex coniectura, отмечая, что после Гомера хорошо засвидетельствован глагол ἐπιψεύδομαι. И кроме того, предлагаем обратить внимание на сочинение христианского автора IV в. Дидима Слепого О Троице в издании Ингрид Зайлер (1975; именно это издание использует TLG), где цитата из Гомера – стих II. IV, 235 – приводится с чтением ἐπιψεύδεσσι (De trinitate, 540 В 8 [б. 13, 1. 7]).

Итак, если предположение Мааса верно и слово ἐπιψευδής, наряду с гомеровскими гапаксами ἄψευδής и φίλοψευδής, существовало в языке, то, исходя из контекста, оно могло служить поэтическим синонимом к ἐπίορκος – perfidus (‘вероломный’).
